

ABSTRACT

A cart for an electronic device includes a platform configured to support the electronic device and a cord-retaining portion configured to retain a power cord of the electronic device. The cord-retaining portion includes a first opening that extends in a first direction substantially toward a mid-portion of the cart and a second opening that extends away from the first opening in a second direction that is different from the first direction.